WORKING PAPERS

1. “Bankruptcy and Serial Entrepreneurship” (job market paper)

Award: Financial News & KAFA Doctoral Student Dissertation Award

A key policy goal of personal bankruptcy laws is to protect wealth of failed entrepreneurs, thereby fostering serial entrepreneurship. I evaluate this premise by exploiting windfall wealth from inheritances to generate exogenous variation in personal wealth after bankruptcy. I find that windfall wealth increases business ownership of failed entrepreneurs but has no effect on entrepreneurs who experienced severe failures. Moreover, those who respond to windfall wealth have lower income, indicating their lower entrepreneurial quality. Overall, I find support for the positive effect of wealth protection on serial entrepreneurship, but also find that lower entrepreneurial quality and personal experience of severe failures may limit the effectiveness of the policy.

2. “Biased Judges? Judge Characteristics and Bankruptcy Outcomes”

Award: Best Dissertation Award at Conference on Asia-Pacific Financial Markets

Exploiting random assignment of judges to corporate bankruptcy filings, I examine the effect of judge characteristics on outcomes. First, I find that cases assigned to judges who grew up during the Great Depression are more likely to emerge from bankruptcy, whereas those assigned to judges with economics training and conservative political ideology are less likely to. Second, I show that case duration is shorter (longer) when the potential case outcome is consistent (inconsistent) with judges’ preferences. Third, the judge characteristics do not correlate with post-emergence outcomes. Overall, the findings suggest that the effect of judge characteristics may be concentrated in marginal cases where the economic benefits of liquidation versus emergence are not significantly different.

WORK IN PROGRESS

1. “Bankruptcy Quarantines” with Kasper Meisner Nielsen

This study examines the introduction of bankruptcy quarantines in Denmark. Quarantines disqualify managers of bankrupt limited liability companies for up to 3 years if the bankruptcy court finds them guilty of gross negligent business practices. We find evidence consistent with quarantines discouraging future business activity and negligence: After the expiry of the bankruptcy quarantines, quarantined individuals are 15% less likely to be managers or owners. Quarantined individuals are also less likely to be involved in future bankruptcies or future criminal activities. Strawmen appointments seem to be the main negative side effect of quarantines: During the quarantine, the fraction of families that are active in management increases from 10% to 30%. Strawmen appointments change the managerial labor pool, resulting in an increasing fraction of managers that are foreign residents or receive social transfers. Overall, our findings provide the first systematic evidence on the consequences of bankruptcy quarantines.
